
THE ERUPTION

Pompeii citizens endured a catastrophic deadly eruption that caused the end of Pompeii. It took place in Italy, in the small peaceful city of Pompeii. The volcano that caused the tragic event was the destroyer of Pompeii...Mount Vesuvius, which they once thought was their greatest protector.

HOW IT ALL STARTED

One day Pompeii began to crumble, and everyone then thought it was an Earth quake. Half of Pompeii was nearly destroyed by now. Eventually the whole of Pompeii began to worry.

Without any warning lava came rushing down towards Pompeii. The eruption went as high as 14km above the air. Most of Pompeii was half destructed. Out of nowhere the side of the mountain blew off.

The whole of Pompeii was destroyed. It was covered in about 9m of ash all the way through body's and animals everywhere under the ash filled land.

And what was once known as the small peaceful city of Pompeii was destroyed and buried. It also destroyed many other peaceful places. But while Pompeii perished all was forgotten and Pompeii was no longer in sight.

Years later the city of Pompeii was found and body that were once alive were dug up. Did you know that Mount Vesuvius took 18 hours to erupt while the side effects led up to the massive eruption. Also did you know they actually dug a fast food restraint menu up also they had water works before we did they really are remarkable.

There are also some sad and unfortunate things. Like when they dug up a dog so they must have had pets back in the day. One of the other places knew it was coming because it headed for Pompeii first although they knew it was coming they still died because they hid in a cave. While they hid there was ash filling up the cave and they did not have any food or water.